Rejuvenation

Admit it, we've all lost our attention spans. In today's age of apid-fire videos, digitized sound bytes and sensory-overload global networks, we're lucky that our patience lasts through the opening paragraph of A Tale of Two Oties or the action intro to Wing Commander (Hey, you still reading?). The same goes for card games. I learn one CCC and move on to the next with the flickleness of a summer's breeze. Nowackys we're always looking for new things, new challenges, new forms of entertainment. Only the best of the best holds our attention.

I mean, how much time are we willing to devote to old classics like Yohtzee and Monopoly anymore? Not much, I'm betting a T-rex would spend more time playing with a roll of cabbage.

The fact is, we all get tired of the same old, same old.

This winter, thit the doldrums—no one wanted to play cards anymore. Sevend of my friends, who had once pulsed Magic II in righter name in shadouly and committing for any exam they had in their these, were now eithing of their shadoul and climically out weekly class ignored. The red in our well-when and games were a proceduring the endingered special fail. People were getting or with the gall of min of the mild COGE—Mally free forth, poorly designed games you know, conflound that you'd really, really file to tack back for the paper you know, conflound that you'd really, really file to tack back for the paper you know.

Along comes Modale-eorth. The Wizards. We're all Token fars, so we pick it up ...and guess what "We's lin inve; we're strbing to play it manning, room and night...—had, who needs seep? Cool new cards, an innovative and well-balanced game system, storytelling from Reendell to Minas Moogili—something new, something feels, something new, something feels.

We can't get enough. We're back to building decks with a passion... a couple of characters, a few Nizegil, a bunch of undead, a smidgen of swords and stricks, a pent of comitat cards—while fem up, play and time-turn away. How can you not have this fewer? There are all kinds of new cards to get time, just when my rung deck was on the first, cranifery out duds undeserv-ting of a Cracker Jack box, along comes Ringlore, and my deck's knocking offl opponents faster than the Cambitagedes combo in Helm's Deep And you knowwhat? It's not just Middle-ords, Deepdhing's exoting again. Cause that's the answer. We all need to be refreshed once in a while, whether it be with a change of pace file a zool in every agme, or a filler expansion set to spice up our old favorites. Middle-earth's done it for me, I'm sure there are games and sets out there that'll do it for you. So the next time you're feeling a little bored with the usual, try some-

FAN SATISFACTION GURANTEED!

The big topic this month takes the shape of Star Wars: The Castomizoble Card Came. No, not whether on root fans like it, it seems to be a hit amongst the masses. What wasn't a hit were the, um, technical difficult lies we experienced when we covered it in issue #11. It seems we hit snaps in our price guide when it came to this popular C. C. G. Another barn-burner was "Rim's Mean-Spirited Mosic Tips." a noil out.

Another barn-burner was "Brian's Mean-Spirited Mogic Tips," a pull-out poster in issue #10 that featured a photo of the mysterious "Brian," tearing up Magic cards and spouting insulting "tips" to C.C.G. enthusiasts.

Enough stalling, let the abuse begin...

Jedi Mind Tricks

What the hell is wrong with you guys? The prices for the Star Wars C.C.G. is total bull! Are you guy nuts? Han Solo is only $10? $10!? The most expensive card is $10?

Frecently went to four C.C.G. stores and eight comic shops and they all say that Han Solo is at least $80.

Fix your damn prices!

Sunnyvale, CA Gully your honer.

Brian Bashina

What's up with that Brian guy condemning Magic players in Indeest #10 ("Bilan's Meen-Spirited Tipe")? I suppose that a man is entitled to his own opinion, but did he have to print it in an internationally sold measurie?

As a Mogic player, I couldn't help but cringe when I read the whole article. And the pictures an evil looking guy tearing up some of the most revered cards in the C.C.G. biz. It was truly and purely blasohermous. If I ever see this Brian fellow, anywhere, even in the presence of the Pope himself, someone will have to hold me back. Nothon Hunter Hendersonville, TN

In your article "Brian's Mean-Spirited Magic Tips," did he really tear up all those Moxes and Lotuses, or were those just copies? If he did, I warna find out his address so I can pick up he outboo.

Ryan MacGavin Laramie, WY

When we can that article, we know that armory Blain fish would get some of our fast behalf up. Maaic Creativity 101

Lately, it seems like people want more powerful cards instead of learning to use cards that they consider "weak to average" more creatively. Players seem to be instead on creating they opponents, either by causing ungody amounts of damage or by locking up the game with some rare or OOP "game breaker."

Yeals 18's cool to win, but if was card:

do it without some amazingly overpowered card, you need to go back to Mayic Creativity 101. I don't care if you're playing with friends or in a major tourney, most tourney champs have creative decks, and that's why they win—embody sees it coming. People don't respect skil, ather in deck building or played!

Look at how people have been clumping on Homelands, and on Folian Empires before that Mainly, they complain, "There aren't enough power cands' We want game breakers" Lides' Town when they have breakers.

enough power cards! We want game breakers!" I don't know about you, but I think it's more fun to be killed by a Drudge Seeleton (or even an Atogi) than to lose to a 73-point fireball, or a 17/17 trampler.

Robert Barr Harrisanville, MO

Here bere! The next gay to Time Walk, Regreeth, Time Walk, Recall, Time Walk, Regreeth, Timewalk gets a pilodriver.

Onulet Oversight

I was looking through my artifacts and I came to the Onulet card (Revised). I looked at the illustration on the bottom of the cards and if thad "illus © Kerstin Kaman," but on the card picture it had "Anson '93."

What's the deal? Michael Rivera Universal City, TX

Anson Moddocks did, in fact, point the Deulet Slight trose on Wolf's ourt Mountoins of Money

Designing trading cards to play with is the ultimate idea of making money. You out some sort of sense in it when you make them playable. Still, it seems that some people forget this special point: Magic is for making money. Mountains of money. Richard Garfield is NOT some sort of gamegod who invented a really fun game to play for this only numose. The idea hebind the game would still work if you could choose the cards you buy, if there were no rare cards, and if decks would be limited to a fixed number of cards. The players would have to focus on deck composition and strategy rather than on getting the famous

Black Lotus or Shivans Some say that not knowing what you get inside a hooster pack brings the element of "surprise" and "luck" into the game. Yes, that's right. But it also makes WorkC very rich. To make it clean I have nothing against "getting rich" or people with good ideas to make money. But it's a fault to glorify Mr. Garfield and Wort' as people who only wanted to make a good game.

Thomas Rode Cyberspace

Seniors received cash: suniors, scholarships In the seniors final, a best-three-of-five match. Loconto and Lestree both played slowly and conservatively. After splitting the first two games in nearly three hours, the exhausted players asked the judges if they could play just one more duel for the championship title and share the first- and secondplace prizes. The equally tired judges agreed. The last duel was faster and very close: Locorto seemed dogmed, but drew a Swords to Plowshares at a critical moment and went on to win. "I was really happy that I got a chance to play Bertrand again." Loconto said. "He was me in the qualifiers and it was goric if nothing else to have gotten a chance to go up against him in the final name." More than 350 players from 18 countries competed for $60,000 in cash prizes and scholarships at the February 16-18 tournament in New York City. The tournament followed Duelists' Convocation Type II tournament rules, except that each deck had to include at least five cards apiece from the Follen Empires, Chronicles, Ice Age and Homelands expansion card sets. "Wizards of the Coast did a superb job," Loconto said. "My expectations were more than met." White was the color of the day, with most decks containing at least one Land Tax, Disenchant or Swords to Plowshares, including three of the top four decks in both diseases. All-black Necropotence decks won the juniors and tred for third in the seniors division. Three of the top eight seniors decks, including champion Loconto's blue/white Milistone deck, were designed to "deck" the opponent, or run them out of cards One highlight, the champion said, occurred at the hotel where he and some friends stayed. "There were a lot of neonle playing, and playing for ante, and just having a really good time. It was really fun meeting all the players that I'd only read about before, and meeting all the international players."

The next oro tournament will be held May 3-5 in Long Beach. Calif., aboard Queso Mary, with a total not of $100,000 sold between the two divisions. Competitors will draft their decks at the event rather than building them beforehand.

The remaining pro tour events will be held in Columbus, Ohio, at the Origins convention bily 4-7: in WotC's hometown of Scattle. Wash., August 17-18; in Atlanta, Ga., in October, and in Dalas in November. The total prizes at each event range from $125,000 to $200,000.

The top-ranked members of the Duelists' Convocation and top finishers at the inaugural orn fournament are nuscanteed spots in the Long Beach event. Other spots are filled by qualifying tournaments. For information, visit WortC's World Wide Web (http://www.wizards.com) or call (206) 204-7702 and ask for the Durksts' Convocation

1996 Toy Fair Report

The American International Toy Fair is one of the few affairs where dinosaurs, dragons and cyberspace Netrunners are much more routine than blizzards, buyout attempts and settlements with the Federal Trade Commission. Last February's annual trade event in New York City for the $19 billion toy industry, however, combined all that and then some card game due August in which players compete to bring dinosaurs to the present, "Creating this game was great fun," said SIG President Steve lackson.

"I got to study hundreds of different dinosaurs and work with some creat scientists and artists to create the pictures." The nonprofit Dinosaur Society is reviewing the soentific information on the dinosaur cards for accuracy.

Decinher: Shadows of the Empire

Dino Hunt was one of the few new CCG products announced at Toy Fair. "The toy industry is driven by toy stores and Wal-Marts and Kmarts and Tays R Uses of our world. If you don't sell to them, this is really not the best show," observed Decipher Marketing Director Matt Mariani His company displayed Star Wars and Star Trek: The Next Generation and discussed previously announced expansions Bise Star Wars: A New Hone (due tupe or bulk) and, for Ster Trak-O Continuum (midsummer) and Holodeck Adventures (late '96). Mariam also revealed intriguing details about Shodows of the Emplre, a Stor Wors expansion tentatively scheduled for next winter. The all-new Shodows book, computer games and tows debuting April explore the time between the "Empire Strikes Back" and "Return of the Jedi" movies.

"We're coing to create from models images that look like they're from the movies," Manani said of Decipher's Shodows set, "We're probably going to get actors with outlits and such and do video shots."

He described Star Wars sales as

"orest, phenomenal," Mariani also addressed the absence of Chrydracra and R2-D2. "You have to be able to adjust some rules that may not have worked out perfectly with the original set. We needed things to balance out inadvertently strong cards from the original set. We're wondering now if Darth is too strong-we don't know, we're examining it. But you can't bring in an unknown character to weaken Darth Vader," Decipher's final Star Trek expansion will be "Next Generation" TV show. A suitable endcap for the Star Trek game, it should include cards like Guinan. Decipher also displayed games like the popular How to Host a Munder series for mass market howers

TSR: A Dragon Dice Explosion

At TSR, one key product introduction was a "spinner display" for small retail stores. Vice President of Creative Services firm Ward touted Introduction to Advanced Dungeons & Dragons box sets containing miniatures, books and CD-ROMs

But of all 140 products expected in 1996. TSR was clearly most excited about Dragon Doe, "It's never been as successful for us," Ward said of Toy Fair, largely because the game had attracted unprecedented mass market and retail attention. "Obviously the world was ready for a collectible dice game," Ward said, estimating that I million starter sets and kicker nacks would be sold this year, "It isn't the success we're used to."

he chuckled. "We don't want to say it'll ALIVE crush neonle like huns!" (For a look at the game's collation problems, see "Amazon Drogon Dice: Urban Legend?" below.) In a back room, Director of Licensing Ted Schmitt met with manufacturers eager to do products with TSR tie-ins. One priority, he said, would be to develop Buck Ropers properties As for the movie. TV show and ride announced at 1995's Toy Fair ("Dungeons & Drogons: The Movie," "Product News," inQuest #1), Schmitt said, those were among the projects Universal's new owner, Seagram's, has decided were invaluable, he said. The recently released Chameleon expansion features the game's second-ever artist, Virginijus Poshkus, and introduces a new terrain action that changes the concept of terrain. A future expansion set will feature multiple artists. Pollak spoke at a crowded Toy Center office that several manufacturers had sublet. "We're here for 700 products." he said, noting that U.S. Games is the world's largest publisher of tarot cards and books. The company also prints noncol-lectible card games and traditional playing card decks Licensing: "Dragonheart" and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame"

Although licensed products were hot, no one property stood out as Mighty Morphin' Power Rangers or Barney the Dinosaur had the past few years.

Still, early winners seemed to be MCA/Universit's "Dragonheart," an Arthurian fantasy movie with Dennis Quaid and a dragge voiced by Sean Connery (due this summer), and "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," an animated Disney movie. Don Hein, Dragon Dior's creative director, said, "The production on Nicker Pack 7 was a real headache," she said. "We were introducing new races to the old dice. It made a really screwy mix."

The production of disce with various ranties was new for both TSR and its Hong Kong manufacture, and the strange mixture of new and old disc required for the set complicated matters further. It turns out the factory put most of the Amazons in the last 100 000 new.

Had all the kicker parks thipped at once, there wouldn't have been a problem. However, TSR received the packs in small increments that it immediately used to fill orders. When complaints started to come in, most of the dice had been shipped. Early buyers found themselves Amazoniess.

Many consumers asked to exchange proofs of purchase for Amazon dice. "I would love to, if we had the dice," Hern said, All 300,000 packs were shipped to customers, distributors and retail stores. However, there's a bright side. The first packs should have soeral moraters, which are rare than Amazone. Collectors should have few problems tracing for what they want, Helin said that future kicker packs wouldn't have the same problem. The upcoming Prevallers and Undood kickers contain entirely new dire.

Electronic Arts' attempt to "port" a Games Workshop board game to the computer, Space Hulk: Vengeance of the Blood Angels, isn't going so well. Originally scheduled for a March release. EA now hopes to have a finished product by late May. EA promises fewer bugs and more intense graphics. Knowing Cames Workshop, "intense" is probably British for "gore," Star Control 3 ($46), delayed from last Christmas, will finally make it to the public by the end of April. The initial copies of the game were a bit bungy, and Accolade doesn't share the "Let the public pay to beta test the software" attitude of other game manufacturers. I you want to make an omelet, you have to break a few eggs. In this case, you'll be making an omelet out of your opponent with some Grade-A Rukh Eggs. In fact, if you play your cards properly, this deck'll keep your opponent scrowbling to stop the Rukh invasion, (Sorry.)

The Rukh Egg is arquably one of the best four-casting-cost creatures in the game, due to its special ability that creates a 4/4 flying red taken at the end of the turn that the Rukh is placed in the graveyard (from play). Of course, you'll want to make the most of the Build's unique ability, and that's what this deck is all about.

Omelet Onslaught's primary focus is to get your Rukh Eggs into play quickly and then, when the moment is right, capple your opponent with a lokalingups. As in most decks, the key to surcess is using your available many speedify and efficiently. Dark Rituals and Tinder Walls are your staples, both one-casting-cost spells that give you serious mana for your buck. The creatures-for-mana Burnt Offerings will give you all the red and black you need in a hurry. (A nifty trick is to cast. an Animate Dead on one of your opponent's big graveyard. creatures and use a Burnt Offering to convert the creature into mana.) Finally, there's artifact mana, a la the super-fast Mana Vaults. Three colorless is nice, but that can get dangerous if you can't untap the Vault and you start getting stung for a point each

Scepter in play, you can bury tapped Vaults to avoid taking damage: 2) Set off a Burnt Offering on a Rukh during your upkeep and use the resulting crana to untag the Maga Vault and 3) Use the Vaults when you're a few turns away from Jokulhaups and then get nd of eventhing Yeah, I know, you've been waitmg to hear all about the most devastation mane wer in the deck, the Rukh Egg/lokulhauts combo, so here goes. Once you've got one or two Rukh Eggs and enough mana, cast lokulhaups. That's the extent of it.

This sends all your eggs to the grave and eliminates all creatures, artifacts and land in play. If successful, your opponent will have no way to block your incoming 4/4 ex-eggs. Jokulhauns is multe costly to cast, so if time's are tough, cast those handy Burnt Offerings on your Rukhs to provide four mana. Since the Rukh's return at the end of the turn, they won't be buried in the lokulhaups, Cool, huh?

Remember: you can put extra mana into your mana pool and cast things after the jokulhaups resolves. Not only will you have 4/4 Rukhs coming back to plaque your enemy, but with two extra mana you can pull something hideous out of somebody's graveyard with an Animate Dead and really put the pressure on

Other things to remember when playing lokulhaups. Don't forget to sacri-LOOK KIDS, IT'S fice all of your land to the Zuran Orb YOUR OTHER if it's in play, and always watch out BROTH-WAIT A for an opponent playing blue-wait MINUTE THAT'S NOT MINE launch a lokulhaups, so prepare yourself with a few other combos that can fry your opponent. To cast the Kjeldoran Dead, you must sacrifice a creature from play. Why not an Egg? By sacrificing it to the Kieldoran Dead. you end up with a 3/1 regenerating creature and a 4/4 fiver ready for the attack

Since the deck often generates quite a bit of extra mana, use your Fireballs to make the ornelet cook a little more quickly. And in the event that your proponent attempts to add cheese to your omelet (i.e., bit you with some direct damage), Simulacrum the damage to a Wil-O'-The-Wisn or, better set, a Rukh ("Hey, thanks!").

The key to making a good omelet is to make sure that it doesn't get burned. If your opponent is playing white, watch out for the dreaded eachester. Swords to Plowshares. Since this card removes the Rukh from play, the Egg never hatches. There are a few ways to best this. The best is to use your Despotic Scepter to bury your Rukh Egg as a fast effect-the Swords to Plowshares fizzles and you still get your 4/4 fiver. As a last resort, a Burnt Offening will also do the trick, but this may cause you to suffer some mana burn if you don't have a way of spending the extra mana

If you're running fow on cards, use Wheel of Fortune to dump your apparent's cards into the gravevard. With any luck, you'll pull a timely Animate Dead to use on one of the big nasty creatures your opponent had to toss. This little trick works even better a few turns after a Jokulhaups, since any high-casting-cost creatures will

To be successful with any deck, you must take full advantage of your sideboard. This sideboard is designed to deal with several of the common deck types you may face. When squaring off against direct damage, swap out the Grant Growths in favor of additional Simulacrums Try to lokulhaups often to keep your apponent from generating enough mana to do heavy damage. Land destruction shouldn't pose much of a threat since most of your mana comes from non-land sources. Assured blue denial decks, take out two Tinder Walls and two Giant Growths and replace with all of your Red Elemental Blasts. Finally, if your opponent's deck relies on white, fill up on Flashfires and Glooms which should prove the undoing of those COPs and white hordes.

Well, that's about it. A lot of this deck is knowing when to play lokulhaups and when to break your Eggs. After a few duels with this deck, you'll have people screaming for Arabian Nights' cards as, more and more, your apparents end up with egg on their face.

ou're rolling. Your 4/4 Air Elemental's going to town and there's nothing in the clouds, to stop it...until your foe blasts the Elecmental outta the sky with a concentrated Pyrotechnks spray. Don't you just hate it when your opponent destroys your stuff?

And then Ice Age comes along with Despotic Scenter, a card that allows you to destroy your own stuff. What? Did Wizards of the Coast tip off its rocker?

None. If you really stop to think about it, Despote Scepter's a great card.

The single biggest reason: Despotic Scepter makes sure what's yours stoys yours. No need to fear those nasty control decks anymore. Blue alone has half a dozen copy or steal spells that Despotic Scenter flat out nulfifies when it's in play.

defenses aren't limitless. Maybe your Scepter's tapped or you haven't been able to draw one yet Eventually, your opponent might break through and grab a crucial card of yours.

But that's the beauty of the Despotic Scepter. It works on more than the cards in play on your side-it works on the cards you own. This is a huge advantage. No one will be able to hold on to your stuff very long. Say your opponent manages to steal your hory Tower. Why stand for it? When you untar or cast your Scepter, tap it and send that renegade Tower to the gravevard. What if your epponent decides not to steal your stuff but to sabolage it with nasty creature enchantments like Mind Whip or annowing land exchantments like Cursed Land? Simple, You don't have to tolerate it. Destroy your stricken permanents imme diately-you're almost aways better off with them dead and gone than used against you. Are you not playing black but would like the speed of Dark fotuals added to your deck? How about a celoffess Dark Ritual? Drop down a Mana Vault, tap it for three colorless and then don't worry about its penalty-simply kill it with the Scepter before your next upkcepe Before you know it, you'll be moving laster than a Mana-Flared Goblin deck You can also get rid of cards once you no longer require their services. If you have a slow deck that needs to build up mana to be effective, play a Manabarbs early and then destroy it when your deck's ready to roll. Same goes for artifacts and creatures. Keep a Meekstone out only so long as it benefits you or use heavy-penalty creatures like the Minion of Leshrac for a turn or two before bidding them a fatal farewell

All kinds of funky combos can come out of a deck with Despotic Scepter. Wanna push opponents closer to the brink of madness? Give 'em a little nudge by playing luxtapose and then picking off their new creature after the exchange, (Hev. it was yours to begin with!) The truly inspired should try Chaos Lord: The "odds" should almost always end up in your favor, since no matter what, during your upkeep, you can destroy one of your permanents with a whack from your mighty mallet and throw the balance in your favor. Yes, it's always nice to have a safety valve on your side. Y'know, for those deadly occasions when you come up one forest short on the upkeep for your tierce, furning Force of Nature.

There may even come a time when your opponent learns to respect this potent artifact and greedily tries to steal the thing. What do you do? Do what the Despotic Scenter does best: Tap it and have it destroy-riselfi

The Premise

Though he has never played it, Grubb says he's using Decipher's Star Trak: The Next Generation Custamizable Card Game as a guide to what not to do. So Mag Force: 7 paid attention to the complaints about how tough it was to find rare cards of the principal "Star Trek: The Next Generation" characters.

"That's one thing that we looked at hard, Everyone wants to run Kirli. Everyone wants to run Spock. Everyone wants to

First off, keep in mind that these rules are not yet final. "We're currently at version 2.7," offers Grubb, "and there are more to come. We've really got a solid core of the game down now. Now it's just a matter of sweating the details. Of course, there are a lot of details".

Steve Domzalski of SkyBox/Fleer has worked closely with the Mag Forcers. As the developer of Fleer's Over/Power, Domzalski is experienced with bringing games from concept to final product.

Domzatski claims you'll be able to play this game right out of a starter deck. This contrines sharply with the $17 TNC CCC, which could so rarely be played with a single starter that Declarate the compelled to release free "Warp Packs" of necessary cards to remedy the situation.

When you complete each episode card, you earn the number of victory counters listed on the card, and you can allot them to the members of the away team as you like. One victory counter represents one point toward winning the game—if the counters are sitting on a character that only one player is using. However, if more than one player has the same character out, storpy counters on that character are divided to get the number of victory points each player has earned. The Kickers Sounds simple, right? Wait, there's more. Whenever you play an episode card, your opponent can play a challenge card. Challenges can range from Klingon spiners to Tribbles and all points in between. This makes for a lot of player interaction and excitement the dedoners dain To overcome these challenges, each crew has three abilities: combat, logic and humanity, Kirk, for instance, is great at combat, few can beat Spock at logic, and McCov excels at humanity. Each ability is further subdivided into other types that can also affect play.

If a crew member is neutralized by a challenge, it can't receive any victory counters once the episode card is completed. Kifled crew are discarded. "When an away team comes along, you want to take out the characters that only your apparent has. That way, you force him to out victory counters on crew that you share with him. id.

you can share in the victory," Domzalski points out. Success can vary greatly. Say Kirk, who has a combat of seven, is attacked by someone with a five combat. Kirk's player draws seven cards from his drawe pale. while the attacker's player draws five. Since it's acroinbet conflict, you're looking for a combat icon on any of these cards. McCov. for instance, could spend a virtory counter to keep Kirk alive. You can use your victory counters to activate other abilities as well. For instance, any of the three in the core crew can avoid death by spending three of that card's victory counters. Is keeping that character alive worth spending the points? That's up to you.

The Cards

The cards will feature photos taken from footage from the entire run of the original "Star Trek" television series. The "Star Trek" films and cartoon are not currently on the schedule, but

"Paramount loves the game," claims Domzalski, "We're taking it one step at a time, but we're certainly talk ing to them about the films and even the cartoon."

There are four different types of cards in the came Crew carris feature the characters from the Stor Trek cast that can be helpful to you. Challenge cards can represent just about anything, but they're sure to cause you fits. Effect cards are used to beln resolve challenges in your favor (the Phaser Blast card, for instance, help you in combat)

Wild cards toss in an unpredictable element. A Beam Me Lip. Scottyl card allows you to rescue an away team member from a difficult challenge. Most wild cards are played and discarded, but some are "permanent." These represent things like starships and the like, which can hang around for as long as you're willing to pay victory counters for them. Capturing the flavor of the series was important in card selection. "T've had to throw out cards with great mechanics." Grubb explains, "There just wasn't anything applicable in the Star Trek Universe that made them work, "Shuttlecraft gave me haves for weeks. I'm still not sure wegot them right. We're going to play-test them in this version and see how they come out " The first set of the game concentrates on the show's first season. Some characters from later in the series will crop up though. For instance, a Tribbles card is a must, even though the furry critters showed up in the second season "Sarek will probably show up in an expansion set," says Grubb, "He was in the second season. Chekov also began in the second season. so he'll be in an expansion set."

The Final Frontier

We work really hard to make sure a game's balanced." Grubb says. "Penple are attracted to a new game through its appearance—the art and name-'Star Trek.' People will be playing this game six months after its release if it's a good game, "There are a lot of good-looking games that have come out and then quietly disappeared. People have simply found something else to be interested in."

If Man Force 7 and Sky. Box/Fleer stick to their own Prime Directive-make a game that's Jun-the Star Trek: The Original Series CCG should live long and prosper!

Guess what? It does. That's why I've spent 182 hours playing this ridiculously fun game, devising new strategies, fine-tuning deck concepts and presenting all the cool tips you're

One Ring to rule them all, One Ring to find them, One Ring to bring them all and in the darkness bind them about to read.

—I.R.R. Tollitee, "The Land of the Bings"

3. Ster with stretegy, Always match your starting character to your over all strategy. Plan on playing a lot of Minions Sties? Then make sure you have dwarves in play to combat those meaner ore soy out bound to come up against. Playing factional include characters that have direct influence bonuses for thiose factions, such as Dariacters of the street of the sound to come up against the sound of the sound

5. Key creatures to common terrain. To be effective you've gotta by your hazards on your opponent, not keep arm your hand. This means playing them in the tow most common tercinis, wilderness and borderlands. Wargs are particularly nearly for wilderrags, and rambulers aim't too shabby for borderlands. If you and up mediation to the properties of the properties of domain creatures, you're probably genna need some open or properties genna need some properties of properties of the properties of credit properties. The properties of properties properties of properties of properties of properties of properties prop

6. Remember uniqueness. All wörzufs and obtanctien are unique, as are the more-powerful limes. Once unique cards are played no one dete is allowed to play them. Somme sensetial to you plant if used? Cet thim out first and you meet have to wore yabout his edit close drowing up in someone det's hands. However, uniqueness is double-design secord. Powerful cards such as Torque of these are great in any deck, but odds are overgone due to thinking the same things. Studied your opponent manip.

thing. Should your opponent manage to play the card first, it'll have to go to the discard pile. If you pull a good card that you suspect your opponent may be olaving, rush to the nearest sile and get it out on your side.

7. Bluffling. There's a lot of strategy involved in the hazard phase. Usually you opponent will have cares, in hand, like Dark Quarrets, or in play, like Even Cloak, that'll slow up or thwart.

your attack. You'll generally want to keep your best attack for last, lebting your opponent use his resources on the weaker foes so you can hammer him with that last Nazgól or Assassin. But this isn't true.

Slip in The Great Goblin early in the attack or hold your noncreature hazards, like Nazgùl permanent-events and all-purpose

till the end to keep your opponent offbalance and afraid.

Deal with your weaknesses. Most of the time you'll want a well-balanced det in your deck-a little bit of combat here, some factions there,....but some, times your theme will leave you with a hole somewhere. You're playing an all-out, treasure-outhering deck? Make sure you have some Muster Disperses. to zap those factions in play so your concept doesn't end up with double marshalling points come council time. You'll also have to be able to take down those bookin' characters stocknilling Swords of Gondolin, Mithril-coats and Magic Rings of Courage who obliterate everything in their path. What's the best way? Corruption, hands down. At the very least make sure you can force your opponent into corruption checks with creatures like Corose-candle or Ren the Undean,

Drawing and discarding. In Middle-earth you cycle through your deck quickly, using and replacing four or five cards a turn. The more cards you see, the better off you are. Use your creature hazards as soon as possible (don't worry, you'll get more) unless you're sure your opponent's party will dispatch them with ease; then just hold off until you can launch a barrage. As soon as you draw your stronger resources, bop off to the nearest sites to play them. If you end up with three rings in your hands, odds are you won't need them all, so get rid of one or two. It's almost always worth using the optional discard at the end of each turn to pull that extra card.

10. Combat dues. You won't win if your guy can't fight. Prepare your-will will have been your guy can't fight. Prepare your-will will have a self with an assortment of combat cards that can handle truckloads of monsters. Resources like Sezage. Dadge and Dark Quarret's help tremendously againt Sauron's vest intermendously againt Sauron's vest broads. Your company may be tough hadds. Your company may be tough need one untapped character as bat- ties and to recome the card you want to piley at that size. Combat modifiers can make it so.

Ringwraiths Revenge

Hey, I'm not evil or anything, but the . Anti-orc and anti-troll cards. There are biggest charge I get out of this game is a bunch of combat cards in the deck to aid playing Nazgůl It probably has something to do with throwing down humongous creatures that are difficult, if not flat-out impossible, to play. The goal of this deck is to convert the world to darkness and play Sauron's meanies. . Shadow-land conversion. The key to this deck is changing wilder. ness to shadow-land with Moraul Night, All your monsters are based in shadow-lands, and cards like Morgul-horse your encount and Fell Beast allow you to play your Nazgūl on your opponent's company.

India Downdooth: One of the maw super creatures you'll be rolling down on

Not to mention that if your opponent's relying on wilderness creatures (wolves, wards and spiders), he'll be screwed. . Faction gathering. What's your surest . Nazgůl killers. Start play with characters that have Nazoūl bonuses: Éowyn, Peath. Voteli, Galva, Why? Because your opponent won't be able to play them, nor will he be able to out them into play later in the game, thus protecting your bigger Nazqui creatures from any Nazqui hunters. Since you may run into steroid-driven orcs (via your Minions Stir Iong-events), also start play with one of your dwarves, like Dáin or Balin

* The Will of Sauron. One card, The Will of Sauron, can become a nightmure for your opponent. Once it's out all hazard long-events remain in play indefinitely, which means events like Moroul Night and Minions Stir don't go away, Wilderness becomes shadow-land and orcs become gigantic...permanently. Yeo. rough business.

you in battle, though you'll probably want to size them for when the going gets rough. Since Minions Stir may be melfect for the long haul and there are always men lurking about, it's a good move to stockpile your three Dark Quarrels · Fodder, Occs are your grunts: the Nazquil are your heavy artiflery. Try to save up two or three orcs to play with a Minions Stir. if possible, zonk your opponent with a path to marshalling points? Factions, Early or in the game, it's probably a good idea to hit sites that will deliver major items to your company, but if you play your hazard cards right, you won't want to visit those sites, Instead, switch owars and start tack-Ing factions. Faction sites don't have automatic attacks to combat and still provide mucho marshallino points.

Nazqūl for the final blow. You'll usually hit your opponent in sourts: a him or two without attacks, then one big one. Hang tough and you'll do a lot of damage.

. The Nazgůl. Of course, the Nazgůl are the focus of your deck. There's no better fun than hearing that yelp of panic as you lay down a 17/12 whopper of a creature For the most part, you'll want to hold on to a single Nazquil for combat purposes and, as you acquire them, lay down the rest as special-effect permanent-events. Mouth of Sauron has the best overall ability (bring any bazard back to your band). while Nazoul like Adunaphel. Ren the Unclean and Indur Dawndeath are all pretty effective econdary weapons.

ON CECK Reviewing the latest releases in collectible

an you feel those temperatures rising? That's right, spring is here, and that means one thing; baseball. And even if those April showers are keeping you indoors instead of out on the diamond, you can enjoy all the excitement of baseball, collectible card game-style. Donruss and NXT Games have released the first Major League Baseball-licensed collectible card game, Top of the Order, And while the game isn't exciting enough to make Tommy Lasorda out as manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers, it does an adequate job of translating some baseball strategy into a collectible card game. Top of the Owler requires basic baseball knowledge and rewards those with a deeper understanding of the game and the athletes who play it.

Unfortunately, gamers who have participated in other baseball simulations like Strat-O-Matic and Micro League Boseball will find that Top of the Order falls short in utilizing the kind of comprehensive statistical database that excites strategic die-hards. Plus when you get down to it, this card game simply isn't that exciting.

Play begins after each "manager" has selected a lineup of nine players—one pitcher, one catcher, one first baseman, one second baseman, one third baseman, one shortstop and three outfielders-and placed them in a batting order (a designated bitter may be used and inserted in the pitcher's spot in the batting order). Each manager then draws six cards into his hand. For each new batter, both managers draw one card.

The defensive manager first chooses a pitch from his hand based on what's indicated in the cards' top left corners, and places the card face down on the table. The offensive manager then checks the top right corners of his cards to consult the various types of swings from which he may choose. The offensive manager has the option to steal before the play is executed and the defensive manager may opt to play his infield in before selecting his pitch.

Once a decision is made: both managers turn their cards face up to reveal their selections. To determine the result of the play, each manager flips the top card of his draw deck and consults the colors in the bottom left corner of the card. Green is favorable to the offense, yellow is neutral and red is favorable to the defense. The colors are then cross-checked on charts. After the result of the at-bat has been determined, there are a variety of factors that may have to be taken into consideration. Runners on have may or may not advance bases on hits, ground outs and flyouts, depending on the run ratings listed on their cards

"Special Play" cards add another dimension to Top of the Order. One type of sperial play card is Lightning, which is used by fast players to gain extra bases or by a defensive manager to keep slow players from usining extra bases. Robbed special play cards can be used by good defensive players to take away a hit or by an offersive manager to mach base when the ball is hit to a weak defensive player. C'Mon Blue and

Most die hord basehell fors ect and breathe statistics, and therefore described that any some three alon consider as death statetical probase. Top of the Order just doesn't live up to the experlabous sail by the great baseball genres that proceeded it

Manager Arques Call cards automatically negate any card or chart result just played during an at-bat. The manager who employs the soundest strategy in using these cards is the one who will most likely prevail. If you think this might get tedious, you're right. Once lineups are set and play has begun, it's mainly flipping cards and cross-referencing colors. And while strategy helps, the game comes down to luck: Will the colors on the cards you flip up help or hurt you?

While it is understood that much of what ones into analyzing hasehall talent is subjective. Top of the Order contains some questionable ratings. For example, Trav-

O'Leary, a part-timer for the Boston Red Sox who is a mediocre player, has better offensive ratings than Seattle Mariners slugger Jay Buhner, who perennially ranks among the league leaders in home runs and runs batted in. Buhner's throwing arm is also recognized as one of baseball's finest, yet Red Sox outfielder Mike Greenwell, who would have difficulty throwing out Roseanne Barr trying to go from first to third on a single, has much better defensive ratings in Too of the Order. Similarly, Houston Astros second baseman Craig Biggio, considered one of the game's most productive middle inhelders, has batting ratings identical to those of fellow second basemen Jason Bates of the Colorado Rockies and Carlos Garcia of the pitcher Greg Maddux, who is considered the league's best, is probably the best

Pittsburgh Pirates, both average performers, But on the other side of the coin, there are some accurate rankings. Atlanta Braves pitcher in Top of the Order. And San Francisco Giants superstar Barry Bonds, a perennial All-Star, is perhaps the best all-around player in Top of the Order. So the bottom line is that you can use players' real-life performances to gauge their prowess in Top of the Order, but you should look closely to find those diamonds in the rough who are not big-name players but can be solid contributors to your team. By the by, you're best off looking closely for star athletes in the booster packs-starters tend to have few great players. Top of the Order succeeds in capturing practically every aspect of a real-life baseball game, but lacks something in realism and keeping people's interest. Hopefully the promised twists in Top of the Order '96, due in June, will add a little drama. Snott Gramling

Gangland!

The Public Enemy" with Jimmy Cagney your avorite movie of all time? Are you looking for a game with elements of action and strategy that doesn't take two weeks to learn or two hours to play? Or are you just fired of deciding to try a new game, then realizing that in order to start, you'd have to buy two starter decks per person before they'd even look at it? If any of these sound familiar, you need to play Gangland? Gangland¹ is a collectible card game only in the broadest sense of the word "collectible." Why? Because everyone shares the same deck. The character cards that make up your gang and your starting hand are dealt to you randomly at the start of the name and any further draws come from a common pile. Enhancement modules (booster packs) and expansions will be available, but using them means mixing them with the cards in your core system-enhancing the playing field as a whole. not your individual chance of success. On one hand, this makes for the most balanced play environment possible in card names.... spoilers and overpowered cards may exist, but everyone has the same chance to get them. On the other, this removes what some people consider a vital part of card gaming-deck construction. Your gang is composed of five characters, dealt to you from the character deck at the start of the game. Two of these will be your "boss" and his "bodyguard"-the boss cannot be killed unless his bodyguard is out of the picture. Each character is rated in three statistics; business savey (the ability to run and manage a business), muscle (a combination of toughness and shooting skill) and lovalty (how likely the mobster is to switch sides...the dirty rat). Savvy is rated from 0 to 2: the others range from 1 to 5. There are also characters that possess special abilities. Scarface allows you to have a six-card hand instead of five. while Bullets Renechelli is a "machine-oun artist" who gets a +1 in combat. If this was a run-of-the-mill card game, these would be the rares; as it stands, they're the cards you most want to get in your initial deal. If a character has a bigh enquish business savey, he can manage a business or Businesses come in three varieties: entertainment, food service and transportation, although the more valuable businesses combine categories Once a business is put into play, you can assign business bucks to it, as long as the symbols on the buck match those on the business generating them. (If you have a hand full of entertainment bucks, but only transportation-based income businesses in play, you're still broke.) There's also pocket money which is assigned to a particular character and can only be used for actions involving him. Once the money is in play, you can use it to finance gang activities. guts?-comes from assaults and assassinations. An assassination can be attempted by any character against another gang member and doesn't require a card. You need a special attack card (file a Massacre or a Drive-By) to try and knock off a Gang Boss, Attack cards can also provide better chances of killing a character or the ability to hit several at once. The "rarest" attack card is The Bomb, which can destroy a business as well as a character The influence of the outside world on the gangs is represented by

"mandatories"-called so because they must be played when you draw them. Union Strikes can shut down some or all of your business dealings. the Police can arrest your panosters and barass your "family " and the F.B.I. and the I.R.S. can get in your face and into your books. Because the cards themselves indicate whom they must be played upon, these cards can ruin attempts at diplomacy—all the non-aggression pacts in the world don't add up to much when the player to your right is forced to discard his gang boss. How do you get out of the hot sent when the coppers are breathing down your neck? Have a good lawyer on your side...or a judge in your pocket. They can counter police actions and even seize your opnonents' businesses for you. (Of course, they can't do a thing about the F.B.I.—they don't call them the Untouchables for nothing.) Finally, there are informants--snitches, squealers, turnments, some of the more useful cards in the game. They can be used to foil an assassination attempt, extort money from an opponent's business (a good idea if you've got a lot of bruisers in your gang but no money men; a greasegue in the belly beats an M.B.A.) or cause a member of an opponent's gang to defect. including his gang bosst

There are two ways to win the game. You can wine everyone else off the map, establishing yourself as the King of the Hill. Or, you can be the one with the most business bucks on the table after two passes through the events deck. The latter is much harder to pull off, as a character with a significant amount of bucks may as well have a buil's-eye painted on his chest. Gongland[†] is an innovative game that not only breaks new ground, but does so without the air of superiority that often comes along with a good idea. As such, there's very little available to which I can compare it.

Vetherworld rell, the first ShoriowSst expension is here and it packs a powerful punch. Arther world centers around the Triumvirate, an alliance between the Ascended, the lammers and the Four Monarchs. The Triumvirate hopes to control the domain of the Netherworld through the use of an artifact known as the Molten Heart That's the story behind the set, but avid Shadowlist players will probably be more interested in how good the cards are. And the answer? If you fixed the card mix in Shadowfist, then there's a lot of good stuff that makes this expansion worth picking up

The core Shodowfst set gave us a small taste of the two factions of the Netherworld, the Four Monarchs and the Jammers. With 33 new Monarch cards and 17 Jammer additions. Nethenworld makes creating a deck around these factions a viable option Although it doesn't introduce any new aspects to the game, Netherworld expands on a variety of existing rules, including ways to gain power. One of the problems with Shadowlist when it first came out was the unbalancing effect of one player getting off to a much better start. Many cards in Netherworld either penalize a player who is too far ahead or give you a power boost when you fall behind. And theme deck players beware! Cards like Discerning Fire and Necromantic Conspiracy hose decks with strong themes. One of the keen things about Netherworld is that, even though most of the best cards are rare, there are a lot of really rifty uncommons and commons. Netherworld Return is an event that has each player bring a random character from his smoked pile into play at no cost-and it's uncommon!

If you're not interested in making a brand-new deck based on Netherworld, no problem! Most of the cards can easily be integrated into existing decks, including 14 new feng shursites.

Overall. Netheneous introduces a lot of cool new cards with an interesting theme that will satisfy both the strategist and the roleolayer,-leff Hannes

Dark Sovereia etting is Europe in all its dark and gothic splendor. In the United States, the Camarilla may have domain, but overseas rule the gypsies of the Ravnos and the long-standing Giovanni family. These two new clars form the basis of Dork Sovereigns, the first expansion set for Vamoire. The Elernal Struggle (né lyhad in 1994). The set also introduces two new disciplines, chimerstry and necromancy, and a powerful political sect of vampires known as the Inner Circle. Even more influential than

All of these form the makings of what could have been a great set. Unfortunately, Dark Sovereigns has its problems.

First off, there aren't enough chimerstry and necromancy cards. Even worse, there aren't enough vampires that use these disciplines. In fact, François Villon is the only non-Glovanni or non-Raynos vampire with one of these disciplines, and his capacity is 10. The Giovanni and Raynos vampires are great, but most of the other vampires are too big! Each clan from the original set gets four new vampires, but very few have a capacity less than five. The big beasts may look cool, but you can only play with so many of them. I would rather have more new Camarilla vampires with

If you only want a couple of packs, it's probably not worth it in terms of play value. If you want to give all the cards in the expansion a try, you'll have to build a lot of different decks. In defense of the set, there are a lot of good cards, and if you buy a bunch of packs or a whole box, you should get a lot of use out of this set Dark Sovergious gets a mixed review. Thematically, the set is really cool, filled with powerful cards that are beautiful to look at. If you buy in quantity, it's a winner But from a logistical standpoint, Dark Sovereigns just doesn't pair up that well with the core set. Hopefully the next expansion will have a better fit. -leff Hannes

Get inside the head of fantasy's darkest artist, Brom,

By Andrew Kardon

InQuest: Refore we begin. I've got to ask you something. What's with the name?

Reper Everybody asks me that first thing. [Laughs] I guess, from my point of view, that's always been my name, so it's not that strange "Brom" is my last name. I grew up an army brat, and in the army, kids have a tendency to call each other by their last names. I still don't know exactly why, it just stuck. Everybody but my parents and my brother call me Brom. Gorald is my first name and I think I fit a "Brom" better than a "Gerald." Has painting elways been e part of your life?

Absolutely, it's one of those weird things. I don't know why, but as early as I can remember I've been drawing or painting. I spent the first three years of my life in lapan. That probably had something to do with me getting started, because they're so visual over there. And then it was on to dinosaurs and it just never stopped.

Do you remember the very first thing you ever painted? I've actually got a handful of really early drawings I did before I started school. And believe it or not, it's the exact dam thing I'm painting today. It's always been monsters. I couldn't tell you why, but that's always been the infatuation: strange creatures and weird fighting beasts. How did your family react to all of this? Painting monsters end bizarre beasts: that's not your typical wholesome entertainment. Luckily. I never really thought about it as a lod, but looking back, I'm amazed at how tolerant they were. They never said a word. The first time I showed my wife some early drawings I did as a little she was like, "Oh man! I was like, "Oh man! | The first time | showed my psychiatrist." My dad really my older brother was really into Edgar Rice Burroughs, so that kind of supported it. So what kind of childhood did you have?

psychiatrist." My dad really wife some early drawings I did as a kid, she was like, "Oh man! I would've taken vou to a psychiatrist."

I pretty much moved every three years. So my childhood was spent in places like Japan, Germany, Haweli and several different states. And while that sounds like Jun. and it was a lot of fun. it was also. I think, part of the reason I became so focused on art. Whenever you moved to a new school or new place you wanted to be accepted by people. And if you could draw a little bit better than those people they're like, "Wow, this guy can draw!" So it helped me make friends

Okay, so you've always been drawing. But what about painting, when did that come about? When I not into high school I was real into black and white stuff

I went to a commercial art school [about a year after graduating from high school and got interested in airbrish and color work it wasn't until about seven years ago that I really started painting with oils. That's something that I recommend to most artists—to be able to draw first. You have to be able to put an interesting mage down, then you can learn to render it later

TSP's Dark Sun world: subsert of an EPG Guardians: co-designed and helped Birth: March 9, 1965, in Albany, Ga.

So you've had some formel art training. Where wes this school?

A little two-year commercial art school in Atlanta, Ga , and we'll just leave it unnamed because I really feel so little credit towards it. It was mostly focusing on mechanical things, the commercial business end. They did have a couple of airbrush-type classes, but they didn't have any drawing or painting classes, it did sharpen me towards professionalism and belo me put a portiolio together, though, What were some of your first jobs? When I was still in school at Atlanta I started a lot of commercial work—some work in night clubs. But mostly for the next three or four years, I clid straight hardcore commercial artwork. And I mean photo-real, airbrushed, just the most treacherous product illustration. I did a couple of logos for CNN at one time, a bunch of stuff for Coca-Cola. I must say those three or four years almost put me off from Illustration altopether because it was so creatively frustrating. I painted a white Dixie cup once for an whether it should be cool gray or warm gray. And I did a warm gray. And then they wanted a cool gray,

Then it was cool gray. Then it was warm gray, ... If you look at the artwork that I do now, and how much fun that looks like-to sit there and go through that for a stinking white Dixie cupl But eventually I did start doing some entry-level comic covers for my sanity. I did a couple for First Comics, a very little unknown thing called Twilght Mon, They're not real memorable and I don't want anybody to go look them up; it's just some early stuff. It was such a breath of fresh arrito do after doing the commercial art work. Where did your career eo from there? After doing that for about three years, I basically went through my old ketchbooks that I did for high school and it's all this fun monster type stuff that Hise to do. I malized that somewhere I'd really gotten off track. The commercial art does pay well, and when you first start out in the fantasy field it just doesn't pay well at all, so it's a hard jump to make But I finally said I have to do this, so I sat down and put topether a painted portfolio of several different things-fantasy pieces, science fiction, horror, And I started to send the portfolio out and I got really lucky, I sent it to TSR and they just happened to peed an artist. They really liked the stuff and they just hired me.

It's kind of interesting too, because I was at such a make-orbreak point in my career living in Atlanta, which is pure commercial art. Me and my wife were going move to New York to try to break into book covers. We had the van loaded up and TSR had shown interest but they hadn't committed yet. And the day we were loading up the van, they called. We had already rented an apartment in lersey and we were about to drive off when they called up and said, "You have the job!" So we took the van and just took another route to Wisconsin [Loughs] It worked out well

" TO....

TSR was a wonderful place to work. So much freedom and 1 respectives to develop mysels as an artist. Working around the other artists there—Jeff Easley, Clyde Caldwell, Fred Fields find later Robin Ruppell—you learned a lot from each other. It was a very creative reshortered.

How long dld you spend with TSR?

Now long and year spend with TSMY. Unas there for forey years, from 1989 to 1993, and most of my ellorts were focused on the Dort Sur world, which was really a lan offunction. Once again, freef file it really lucked into a situation by being the new artist and having a new look to my world. They were starting a new world and they clidn't want it to look Tike their other world that the other artists were working on, So I got their orther world that the other artists were working on, So I got to focus on Desk Sun.

It was so early and they had done so little work that they said,
"We really don't have anything to tell you except the basic outline of what the world is, Just start perinting and we'll write them into this world." For the first year, with the roughest quicklines, pretty much just started painting this world. So TSR was really your first taste of fantasy. What were your waiters profitable of feedings yealthings? The first couple of prior of led were for frogular feedings and the first couple of prior of the first couple of prior of the first couple of prior of the first couple of the first couple year of the first year of year of the first year of year o

That's one of my favorities.

I recently did a painting for Palladium, for a game cover called Might Spown. It was this sort of scary-creature, vicen-type woman, a very haustrung nightmarish piece. I tend to like the disk point-ings a lot.

The other one I kind of the that I did for White Wolf was this undead Confederate soldier and he's got his arms crossed with a gun in each hand and he's looking very mournful. Sometimes with a painting, it's not how well it looks technically but it's the emotion that comes across. And that's what i'm

I try to draw and design as much as I can out of my head. If I get in a bind with muscle connections or strange weapons I stack down photography and occasionally I shoot models. I enjoy that very much, but often it's just a muster of locating the model and taking the time to shoot someboutly. I think what I enjoy moz of all is when I can draw and paint something from magniation because it doester, exist anywhere. And when I can pull that off it's really what it's y all about for my.

Stor Trefc The Next Generation is a tendercark

"Netrunner is very different from Magic: The Gathering," says Richard Garfield. "Those who try it can expect a very different play experience."

And he should know. Having created Mook, the smash hit fantasy collectible card game, Garfield is adding Netrunner, a new science fiction CCG, to his credits, Due in April from Wizards of the Coast Netrumer is cyberpunk warfare at its dirtiest: Virtual reality hackers meet megapowefful corporations in a dreary future similar. to that of the film "Blade Runner."

"I was a cyberpunk fan before I began the project, which certainly made me enthus sastic about the game." Garfield states. Though he says his personal perceptions of cyberpunk have been greatly influenced by navels, ranging from William Gibson's Neuromoncer to Neal Stephenson's Snow Grash, Netrunner is based primarily on R. Talsorian Games' Cyberpunk 2020 roleplaying game. Cyberpunk 2020 provided Garfield with a foundation on which to build without restricting his exploration of the overall world of cyberpunk. "One reason I wanted to work with R.

Talsorian Games is that their world is very flexible," Carrield explains, Netrunner is driven by the same general cyberpunk engine beneath the hood of Cybernunic 2020, but is not bound by player preconcentions to the same extent as names based on rigidly predefined source materisi. Nee Star Trek. Middle-earth or Stor Wars

PLAYING THE GAME

Carfield designed his game around the Interaction between Netrumers (what we primitive 20th century types call "computer hackers") and the huge, powerful Corporations that influence, if not control, nearly every aspect of life in the 21st century world of Cybernunk 2020. While the conflict between Netrunners and Corporations is only a small part of the RPC, it gave Carfield exactly the experience he wanted for his CCG. Treatly wanted a head-to-head game. with conflict and mystery, which led to the current design," he comments.

As in Adoptic, each Metrumner player uses.

A player can draw a card, play a card, draw abit or spond a be (in Netmore, a bit is a unit of electronic "currency" similar to blood in Yaropini, White the Netmunne has free choice of how the actions are spent, the Corporation player must always draw a card as his first action.

As play proceeds, the Corporation lays out cards in a face-down array. Some of these cards represent objectives on the Corporation's hidden agenda. Others represent various pieces of hardware or software used to prevent the Netrunner from accessing objectives during a netrum on the Corporation's data fortress.

Each agenda item has two numeric val-

The Corporation can win by advancing seven points" worth of objectives, while the Netrunner can win by revealing seven bart a enchantments in Mage. "A Corporate player might have kidnapping a genetics specials on her agenda, which might give two victory points and have a difficulty of three bits," Garfield explains. "If this objective is advanced, it might also make the Corporate fullywrif sulure southflic orders."

the amount of cards that can be held in the players' hands and card-drawing conditions. As well, the Corporation can win by "flattining," or killing, the Netrunner, "The game is not about knocking out the 'Runner " says Garfield. "But that specter hangs over the 'Runner throughout the game,"

The Corporation can damage the Netrunner by sending a power surge through the Net or sending a squad of hitmen to the Netrunner's location. Before either can happen, though, the Corporation must "tag" the Netrunner through a sories of traces, and any 'Runner worth his virtual salt won't let this happen easily. Electric shocks and relentless assassins are not, however, the worst nastiness a Corporation can cause: Under the right conditions, he can even divert an asteroid from its path and send it hurting toward the unsuspecting Netrunner, thanks to a card appropriately named I Got a Rock. THE GROUNDWORK

Garfield began to conceptualize the name dynamics for Netrannerin late 1994. While the act of netrunning was central to the design of the game, his original translation of the experience into a CCG differed significantly from the final version "Originally, I wanted each player to be a Trunner playing against a single, shared Corporate deck," Garfield recalls. Runners would have complete freedom to build their own personalized decks, whereas the Corporate deck would be fairly standard, constructed from a pre-established set of recommended cards: Instead of competing head to head, the players would have cooperated to an extent in their assault on the Compretion's data fortress

This early conceptualization of the game stemmed not so much from Garfield's study of Cyberpunk 2020 as it did from his familiarity with cyberounk as a subgenre of science fiction. In many popular cybertales such as "Blade Runner" and the "TekWar" television series, powerful corporate entities are set up as the villains. Runner-type characters acted as techno-

Davids confronting industrial Gollaths. Although this dichotomy worked for mass entertainment, it didn't quite cut it as far as game play was concerned. "I didn't care for the direct interaction between the players," says Garlield. Since netrunning is essentially a solitary experience, giving the players the chance to communicate and make decisions based on each other's actions took away some of the sense of a single individual rushing the electronic battlements of a huge composate threat.

As well, white this original design contributed to the image of the Corporation as an emotionless annousmous entity, it seemed too lifeless, "A deck of cards is no substitute for a real opponent." notes Carfield.

What's more, Carlield found that much of the hardcore cyberpunk literature was not true to the simplistic black and white view of the conflict between Corporation and Netrunner. There is precious little obvious distinction between good and evil in the world of cyberpunk. Carlield is quick to point out that a corporation could be

Runner might just be a plain old thief, out to steal whatever he can and sell it to the highest bidder.

The Corporation vs. Netrumer design emerged in March 1995 as a result of months of play-testing using cut-out blocks of computer-pointer text stack to 3-by-5 note cards. The Netrumer rules then went through three sets of revisions before being finalized in late August. While the fon's share of the design responsibility was Garlield's, WotC worked dosely with R. Talsorian to ensure that the game remained true to the vision and atmosolvers of Cubernusé 2020 R. Talvorian's Craig Williams assisted with the evaluation of the Neturner design and participated in the play-testing, which took place at the 1995 Game Manufac-

"We've always envisioned Netrunner as a simplified version of the netrunning system that is in the game," says Williams, That could mean a level of symbious not previously achieved between RPGs and CCGs: When a Cyberzonk 2020 'run takes place, the 'Runner and the game ref could glay it out using preconstructed Networer decks. "Our audience is really looking forward to it," says Pondsmith. COMPUTER AGE ART

While Carrield was busy tinkering with the game design in the soring of 1995. personnel at WotC and R. Talsorian bunched into eroducing the look of Nytragner. The role of art director at World was something of a hot potato and eventually fell into the hands of Craig Hooper.

"When I came into the project, it was kind of in a mix, though most of the art had already been assigned." Hooper resolute: "I have the class are some." For had already been assigned," Hooper explains. "I was the clean-up crew." Production of the Netrumer artwork continued through the summer of 1995, and the game was given its first play-test with color cards in August.

Wizards of the Coast contacted artists all over the world, many of whom had worked on other CCGs such as Mogic, Shodowfst and Vorgine. Artists were provided with names and brief descriptions of the cards but no rigid audidines about.

the look of the cards.

However, there were some technical requirements. Any images representing the inner workings of the Net had to be invidered was computer, and the prefered was computer, and the prefered medium for final artwork, regardless of osiginal medium, was destroole. "What's unique about Netzmene's that much of the art was submitted as computer files," as Neoner.

For veteran CCG artist Doug Shuler, Netromer posed an exciting opportune and an intiguing challenge. As a cyberpunk fan as well as a Cyberponk 2020 player, he was thrilled to be part of the project. "Twe always been intrigued by virtual reality," Shuler says, "and I'm really into computers."

When he received his original assignment of 10 Netaruner cards (he ended up doing more), Shufer plunged headlong into cybercreathly, "I went out and bought a bunch of books and new software and spent hours learning about computer graphics," Shufer says. Of the 21 card illustrations Shufer

Of the 21 card illustrations Shuler eventually produced for Natrumer, 18 were fully rendered on computer, As hisprimary software, Shuler used Ray Dream Designer, with final touching up done in Adobe Photoshop.

The advice his received from WotC was sarry straightforward. If was lold to go see a couple of morves,* he explains. "For extenors, "Blade Runner," since it has the perfect mood of griminess and darkness. For Net scenes, "Johnny Mnemonic!" and "Lawmmover Man."

Impressed by the visuals in the films, Shuler tried hard to capture the kinetic energy of contensatic cyberpunk. "The cards are just still photos of images that translate better in motion," he explains. charged with ensuring that Netrunner's look meshed with that of Cyberpunk 2020 and other cyberpunk work. "We wanted visuals that were gritty and hightech," he says, "but definitely luturistic, not contemorary."

Acterman-Gray reviewed art by Shuler and many others, including Mark Teclin, James Higgins, Pete Ventes and Anson Moddocks. He enjoyed the process "Moving with the Waards of the Coast art team was very pleasant. Given the amount of material and time constraints, they've been able to produce some beautiful work."

This vision has been transferred to the bla screen in films such as "The

WortC representative approached R. Talsorian Games at the 1994 Origins convention in Fort Worth, Texas. "By that time," says Pond-

smith. "WotC had already talked to White Wolf and Iron Crown about developing other CCGs." The opportunity was intriguing, particularly since Mike Pondsmith president and founder of R. Talsorian Cames (and yes, Lisa's husband), had been toying with the idea of doing a noncollectible card game a few years previously.

Worlds of the Coast and R. Talsonan met again at the 1993 Gen Con Game Fair, and Netrunner development began soon after that, According to Pondsmith, "Carfield had wanted to do a Net-type game and felt Cybergunk 2020 would be the icleal venue since it was the first RPG in the genre."

Guardians is a spatial game, not unlike Chess. Your shields act as your pieces, moving your creatures around a three-by-four "board." When your shield meets an opponent's shield, combat occurs. The winner's shield and its surviving creatures stays on the space and the loser's shield with its surviving creatures retreats to a friendly space.

Guardians has some great card combos (try Embryonic Witch and the Diinn) but relying too heavily on them can be a big mistake. For the most part, one needs a theme to assure success. Don't be surprised if you end up putting undead creatures with your Angels or Schneebles with your Giants as you work backward. to support your deck's theme.

The Basics

Guardians has three phases, each with its own deck-construction considera-

The Draw and Organize Phase: During this phase, creatures and shields are placed into the playing area Remember that a shield can only hold 30 wtality points, and low-vitality creatures allow you more secondary attacks and make your shields harder to kill. Also, more low-vitality creatures should result in greater card draw during the game. Powerful creatures are great in play, but if you can't get them out you could go down in defeat

The Movement and Combat Phase: During this phase, players draw - unicards. move shields and fight combats. Since Guardians is a spatial name, if you can affect an opponent's movement, you can often seal the game in those last few turns of play. Lots of people overlook this aspect of play, concentrating on killing, but spells and items that affect self wanting either a shield or terrain. but as they are easier to defeat, only advanced players can bandle the strategy needed to protect them. In allong game, these vulnerable shields will fall to a shield-killing player.

In Guardians, any card may be used as a terrain card by burning one power stone. But not only do facedown terrain cost a power stone, they don't have any extra abilities. Normal terrain cards tend to give some boous. either restricting a card (like spires or woods) or enhancing a card (such as Slaq Beasts in Dry Heaps). How Do You Want to Win?

There are three ways to win in Guardians: by killing enough shields, by controlling enough lands and by killing a Guardian. It's important before playing to consider what kind of victory you're going for. Shield Kills: The object is to collect five of your opponent's shields. This can be slow to develop, as you must generate enough shields of your own of sufficient power to defeat five opposing shields. This most resembles classic combat. You want to concentrate on good combat cards in this deck. Good cards: Kasmir's Blitz, briberies and some movement spells. Try using Death, Super Model, Merchant, Rik Sook, Inferno, Swarm, Petrified Heart and of course Farmer Brown

This deck doesn't have too many rares (although at this writing, the rarities for Dogger Isle weren't pinned down). This deck has proven powerful against some very experienced playvery fast shield/terrain deck and an equally fast swamp deck.

This dock has three main objectives: 1. Stop my opponents from channeling while allowing my creatures to receive channeling. This is why I included Power Lunches. Ogres, Smoke Spirits and Rik Sooks. 2. Stop flying. Thus the Khnumian Stronghold, Spires and the

Spikey Crenelations 3. Stop ranged attacks. This is why I included the Smoke Snirits and Schneebolts. So what about all the other junk in Force Barriers, Pepe's Slow Down: I always take a few movementoriented spells. They're sp useful Dispel Magic: Uke tittle pieces of gold, each and every one. Vitales Dark Cloud: This will help weed out some little guys before my medium-vitality Ogres hit the table. Gold Bribery: This deck has some problems with some of the quirkier command cards and with little guys, Oppressed Slaves and Angel of Death: This'll get me some stones if the game drags on.

Unity Wart Flend: Ogres like babes. Cleric: Most of my creatures are mortal, but with the aid of a healer, they become reigh well invulnerable. Razor Sliph: As long as I'm in the Spires anyway... Caring Guy: Helpful to all the mortals in my deck Great Black Ri'shar; I need a few area-of-effect cards, and since this one is good card, especially when used in nunction with the spell War, i.e., move, retreat, attack with another force, kill shield. Lancer I was looking for a creature to take care of some of the bigger creatures in the game like Dragon Wing-I wanted to stick a mortal with this lob.

By the way, I've come really close to running out of cards in two games, so the size of the deck can be beefed up to accommodate. One might also want to anclude a Hammer of Doom or two to slow down some of those really fast decks. -- Luke Peterschmidt

Land Victory: But you don't have to kill anyone to win. The most common beginner victory condition is controlling six undisputed lands. This is achieved when a shield lands on a space without a land card under it. A good strategy here involves loading up on spells that protect lands, as well as terrain-enhanced creatures, Good cards: Force Barrier, Channelers, Pestilence, Hand of Chronos and Vitales Dark Cloud, Good creatures include Mules, Lving Scum, Lawvers (along with Bruce the Goose-ouch!) Djinn and class bonus creatures (Knights, Slag Beasts and so on).

Guardian Kill: This is a fast, hard-hitting deck, with emphasis on an all-out kill. Channeling works well here: briberies too. You'll need all the firenower you can get your hands on in order to take out a Guardian! Good cards: Energy Exter, Force Barrier, Work Crew, Briberies, Amulets of Flying, Channeling Flux, Potions of Movement, Essence and Power Lunch. Your creatures should include Dragon Wing Lords, Greater Energy Elementals, Mist Veilers, Smoke Spirits, Rik Sooks, Ugly Wart Fiends (watch out for Babe Bribenes) and Channelers. Various things to keep in mind as you create a deck. The biggest thing to remember when designing a deck is balance. A loosided deck may take a few wins from unsuspecting opponents, but more often than not it will lose. Try to include both high- and low-vitality creatures. Try to include both channeling receivers and nonchanneling receivers. Don't be too reliant upon spells or items, as one Specter's Ward can ruin your whole plan. Don't be too reliant on stones, but make sure that your deck has a use for the stones you have. And lastly, make sure that your Guardian is complementary to your deck

Most Powerful Card

Whenever you go through your card collections looking for the ingredients to your next killer deck, you invariably stumble across the cards that make that though run through your mind. Incomprehensible art. Vertigo-ind ucing text. Conyoluted rulings.

What the hell were these companies thinking?

Then you have the other extreme. Those cards that make this whole roleplaying shtick worth the effort it takes to translate the Dead Sea scrolls that some rulebooks resemble.

From the absurd to the awesome, we proudly present the 1996 InQuest Book of World Records...

Wheeling & Dealing

How to trade Magic & other collectible trading cards matter, is the amount of concepts you can use for building a deck. With over 1,000 different cards available, the possibilities are endless. The problem, however, isn't always coming up with the ideas—it's getting the cards you need to make the deck you want.

f the best things about Magic,

The easiest way to get specific cards is to buy them, but shelling out cash for every single card you want can really add up in a hurry. Most people don't have the budget to build their collection that way. But there's always the alternatives trading.

Trading is an integral part of the game. It not only lets players interact with each other outside of the game itself, but it helps improve your collection. But trading Magit carch int'l the swapping a dollar bill for four quarters. There are a lot of factors to consider.

If you're hoping to learn how to no of little kids and take advantage of your friends, you can stop reading right now. Maga: a game and, although it's easy to lase track of sometimes, games are supposed to be fun. So now let's take a look at just how to wheel and deal your cardboard currency.

Stocking Up

Before you go hunting for people to trade with, you should set aside all the cards that you're willing to gart with it' you're not willing to give up any of your cards, don't expect to get anything back. Sounds obvious enough, but a lot of people don't take the time to figure out what they'll trade and what they want to hold on to. Let's say you're got a Shivan Dragon and it's your favorite carbot Thee's nothing you'd trade it for short of a Mix or something, so it's essentially not include. Do you war every person you try to trade with asking you to your Shivan Dagon? Of course on. The simplest solution is to not show it to them. That's why you should be to them. That's why you should be you are withing to ple up to got et cards.

that you want even more.

The next obvious question is what do you put in your trade stock? Before you do anything, you need to figure out what's worth tracing and what isn't. Rule number one: commons aren't worth tack.

A lot of people try to pawn off their commons on other people because they have lots of extris. The problem with this is that everyone has extra commons. Most in-print commons are available for under 10 cents, and anybody who has the budget to play the game can afford to buy his own.

Putting common cards in your trade stock is not only ridiculous, it's insulting to the person you're trying to trade with. Of course, the obvious exception to this rule is out-of-part commons like Arabian Nights' Rukh Eggs and Legends' Psychis Purges. Cards that are no longer in print are usually more difficult to get a hold of, and therefore have more trade value.

However, don't think anyone is all through the solid because they're not making them anyone. Fallin Engine Solid S

Goblin Caves?

Okay, so you've eliminated commons. You should also intow that most in-print uncommons, even good ones like Dragon Whelp and Hypnotic Specter, aren't terribly sought after Most people are primarily interespet in trading for rare and out-6-chief arek.

Specter, aren't terribly sought after, Most people are primarily himsested in tracking for rare and out-of-print cards. Still, if you've got room in your binder or track box, it doesn't hart to throw in your excess uncommons. You never show when someone is gight or beed another Humfcane, and popular.

lmage is Everything

Well, not really, but it certainly doesn't hurt. Once you've set aside the cards you're writing to trade, it helps to organize them so that they're easier for people to go through. Sorting by set and/or cofor works, and you can further sort the cards by rarily if you want. Next, you should put your cards in PVC sheets in a binder. It's a cheap and effective way of keeping your cards sale while people check out what you've got, if your cards in epistin a suck, it's too easy for someone to slip one out when you're not looking. All in all, pufflow your cards in a binder is a bet-

Balancing

Okay, so now you're set to start trading. You've found someone to trade with—you've got something you want. But how do you know if it's a far trade? A good general rule is cards of you!all as-ity have about equal value. An Joe Age name like Karphisan Forest is worth about, as much as any other for Age rare, like an Oath of Lim-Dill, for example. Same goes for uncommons, but this usually only goes for uncommons, but this worth you goes for uncommons, but this worth you goes for anoth that are still in print. Clearly an Antipatios rare like the Argi-Van Archaeologid is not worth the same as fourth fields not manual Wall.

And just because two cards are from the same set doesn't mean they're worth the same in trade value. A jetter's Cap is worth significantly more than a Necropotence, just like a Mox is more destrable than a Natural Selection.

In these cases, it's often helpful to use the price guide in the back of this magazine. You may not agree with the card prices, but they're usually a good sauge of the comparative value of two cards. In the above example, the Auchacologist is listed at $300 while the Aucharents Well is unit $31.50 does that mean material. 10 Animate Walls are worth about the same as an Archaeologist? Not quite. lust because the values add up the same on both sides doesn't mean the trade is fair. The Archaeologist is a tough card to find, so the person trading it might want a card that's equally tough to get in exchange for it.

In the end, card values and rarity always take a back sent to how much you want the card. If you're really interested in petting a hold of a good card like a Royal Assassin, don't worry if you have to give up a little more than it's worth. If you've got a lot of extra good cards it might be worth giving up a few to get a card you've been looking for. More than anything, a trade is good if both people are happy after the trade's been made

KRACK!, I'll get your cards convey, see?"

Pairing Down Sometimes you'll end up going through someone's stuff and seeing a lot of cards your interested in. If you're even lucker, he'll be interested in lots of your stuff. So what's the best way to make a deal involving lots of cards? One way to do it-if both people agree—is to use the price quick values for the trade, fust add up all the cards on both sides, and then cut cards out until the values even out Another good way is to have each person key down all the cards he wants in front of him in the order he wants them. Then try and pay up cards or small sets of cards on each side that are worth about the same to both people. Each time you make a pair both people agree on, set those cards aside in a separate pile. Keep doing this until there are no cards left on one side or you can't come up with any more pairs that both people scree on. Then give the person back the cards you didn't pair up, and take your unpaired cards back as well. The final trade is the two stacks you and the other person set aside. It may not always work out so great, but it's a good way to deal with trading lots of cards at once. That Whole Morality

"Magic is a card game, not a stock market."

Thing Again Despite what other people might try to tell you, good trading is all about etiquette and consideration. No one is forcing you to trade with someone if you don't like him, and vice versa. If you're obnovious to someone you're trying to trade with, he can just get up and walk away. But if you're nice and make fair offers, you'll find it much easier to engipage a purcoudul trade. Some people would suggest taking advantage of people who don't know what their cards are worth They'll say. "If they don't know what their cards are worth, they deserve to be ripped off." If you buy that, person who thinks a Mov. is worth five bucks Getting a good deal at someone else's expense is never worth it Modic is a card game, not a stock

Does this mean you shouldn't make a deal if it's in your favor? Of course not. But if someone's willing to give you a Juzam Djinn for your Baron Sengir, you should tell them what their card is actually worth

Although he is more than pleased with the opportunities he has been given through Wizards of the Coast and the CCG industry in general, Venters hopes to someday get back to what brought him to illustration in the first place. "I'd like to return to comics to do some graphic novels," he says, "either full-color or just penciling. I'd like to produce a sequel to Sweetments and a science-fiction trilogy I've had planned for 10 years. Of course, I'd like to be painting trading cards for many years to come too." Tracking trends in the card game market

THE MAGIC MARKET SOFTENS

Are your Magazands worth anything any more? Those of you who persise the Mogic portion of the InQuest Price Guilde on a regular basis are sure to have noticed that in recent months, the blue price-going-down bars have outnumbered the pink pricegoing-up bars. That trend continues with this issue of InQuest. Retailers across the country are acknowl-

Retailers across the country are acknowledging that the market for single Megic casts has softened. Rare cards selling for $5 to $6 sex months ago now have assing pinces of $3 to $6.4 Prices for many uncommons have been slisted on half. Royy Malone of Hansen's Hobbies in Wilmette, III, admits, Vifevie lowered the prices on many of the rares. As for commons, and uncommons, there is not a lot of interest."

According to Malone, certain Magic acrds are holding their price guide values, "I sold three Beta Black Lotus cards recently, each in excess of $200. I easily sell cards like Deflection, juster's Cap and juster's Mask at price guide prices."

Malaine happily adds, "Despate the fact that we've cut prices on most Mogic cards, the dollar volume for single card sales in our store has not decreased. It's merely a stlustion where games are becoming more selective in what they buy, Last summer a gamer might flow bought) these $4 cards, but he's now swing up to buy a $10 to $15 card."

So it appears that many retailers are dealing with customers who have become more selective and more interested in getting quality than quantity out of their purches. Scott Micheel is the store manager of one of the two shops operated by Comit. Warehouse in Albuquirquip, NAI. He agrees that the softening of the Magic market is for that the softening of the Magic market is for mail. Micheel size, "Yee, we've bowerd prices, plus two of our competitors in the area recently held month-long half-price sales."

How much further will the market soften? "I see lots of room for further softening, especially cards in the Revised and Fourth Editions. There seems to be a provi-

ing lack of buyer interest in cards that have been reprinted several times—we call them the common rares. I don't think Magic prices are ready to stabilize just yet."

Star Wars Still Streaking Has the Star Wars CCG cooled of? Not

In six let sur was CLC Cooled on Type, yet, as most retailers indicate that sales of Star Wors starters and boosters matched or exceeded that of Morja during the morth of February Jersmy Coolige, who oversees CCC. sales at several of the seven Henres & Faritaises stores in the San Antonio, Texas area, reports, "Star Wars is easily outselfing Mogic. Actually, San Wars sales for the month of February were greater than in January."

Retailer reports indicate that the key Stor Wors character cards continue to sell in the $20 to $40 range. Says Sout Micheel, "15s the collectors, not the gamers, who drove the prices up on cards fike Vader. I don't expect the prices on the biggies to decrosse any time soon."

While the Vader, Skywalker and Solo have hit a pricing ceiling, there has been upward movement with related cards such as Devastator, Har's Heavy Metal Blaster, Milenium Falcon and Vader's Lightsaber.

Enter the Dragon Dice

It's not exactly a collectible card game, but reader demand has been large enough that values for the Dragon Dice collectible dice game can now be found in the InQuest Price Guide.

If you've never checked out TSR's collectible ditce game, here's a brief symopsis: Plant source and then battle for supremacy. As the dice are rolled, spells are cost, armies attack, troops retreat and counterattacks are launched. An average game takes about 20 minutes to play.

How nopular is Dragon Dice? "Except how properly the properly in the proper

In the Zone Again

Donruss recently released Expansion Teams as a follow-up to its Red Zone football card game. The set consists of 98 cards, of which 21 are rares. Reports indicate that a complete set can be easily made from one 36-count box.

rookies Kalana Carter, Jeon Carllowy, Rasham Satham and Koerlet Stewart.
According to Will Chase of Wizard

World in Nanuet, N.Y., the cards of fire Metail, Deion Sanders and Kordell Stewart are like no others found in the original Red Zone. "The Sanders card is powerful because it can be used on offense or defense," notes Chase. "Metail can be used as a nanning back or a receiver. Stewart is a three-way player: quarterback, receiver and running back."

Chase also contends that the Byce Paup card found in Expansion Team's is every bit as playable as Greg Lloyd and that Brett Favre matches the Jeff George and Steve Young cards. Prices for Expansion Teams singles can be found in the InQuest Price Guide.

Who's Buying This Product?

Over the past two months, the Indiguest Price Guide has reflected a slable homase in the values of the ultrarian cards found in Fligodi's One-on-One Mockey Challenge. Many of the smaller reals Stopp in the U.S. are not carriving the game, a silsuation resulting from a marketing strategy by Playoff to promote the product or Canada and the major reals of our contraction of the contraction of the contraction of the Wayne Armot of Bluemose Cards in Portine-Claim's, Quebes, wayne Arnost or subernoose cards in Promescares, Queeke, is doing a bink business with the Playoff CCG. "We're selling the Gretzky, Lindros and Mano Lemieux ultrarare cards in the $100 to $200 range. That's in Canadian dollars, of course The ultrarares are very tough to find, but when we have them, they move fast. We've been able to get $25 for the Utzrares picturing non-star players. In London, Ontaria, John Noble of Nobbernan Sports Cards is experiencings smith stuccess with One on One Notelye Challenge. "I recently sold a Greatly utzrare are for $250, in my estimation, you'll study need to buy, on the wrenge, 80 boxes, for first that card, So I feed $250 is a fairful price." Nobbe is also setting the non-star utzrares for $250 cs. h.

So how does One-on-One-Nocky Chicklenge play? "I can't roally answer that," says Arnott. "Nearly all of our customers for that product are collectors, not garden from only aware of two or three includidals who have tired to learn the garme." With the key ultrariare cast selling for $100 to $250, it's no wonder the garme is attracting more collectors and investors.

than gamers. (By the way, the current Canadian monotary exchange rate is 35 percent. Translated, that means the Canadian dollar is worth 65 cents in U.S. funds.)

* Excellent. here are cords that on into winning decks. Ther're not always worth going out of your way to commendate, but if the refer is right these early should find a plats in most dads.

· · · Average. These cods cenerally round out a well-based deck. Many cards in this category complement a variety of other cands that may be in your deck. Which cords you use from this category depend locarly on what your deck concept is, and whether or not they complement the Feur- and five-ster rands your deck contains.

.. Poor. This category includes mony common creatures and socile that are often passed over in favor of more powerful cords with similar costone costs. It also includes cooks that may seem powerful at first alongs but are estable discorded mere after than played.

. The Worst, liere are three basic types of cards in this rategory. The first are these that can duplicate the obilities of prother eard, but at a higher entire cost or other demand on the coster. The second includes spells whose uses one very obscure. There may be an evergoe card combination than includes these cards but they are aften too difficult to execute in peder to be worth your while Finally these are cords that seem to be "fillers." They often leave players weedering if there is a good use for such cooks. Bixelly, there isn't.

Inapplicable, iku ands one hade resources. You ma't win a come playing only these coeds. but you can't win without 'ero, either.

Swansong Rick Swan's unique take on the world of gaming The Sected Official Office of the world of gaming The Sected Of

In 1985, things looked bleak. I lived in a town the size of a pimple.

My bank account was stuck in the single digits. I had a pretty secure job as a newspaper editor, but offer a year, I was already sick of it.

And silly me, I wanted to break into the game business, even though I wasn't exactly the world's best prospect. I had no contacts, no expenience and no knowledge of the industry other than what I'd read in magazines.

8ut what the heck, I decided to give it a shot anyway, and here's what I did. The dates are approximate. Names have been profited to what I did. The dates are approximate. Names have been ome protect the identities of the creeps who rejected me. This is a true story.

Date: January 1985.

Actions I spot a promising help wanted ad, TSR, the home of Drogons, is Drogons, is seeking to HI a staff position. I send in my resume distalling my sint is an ordior, the handle of game reviews I'd written and my willingness to do snything. I enclose a Polared of me surrounded by stacks of games, graning like an aper.

Result: Nothing

Date: February 1985.
Action: Undeterred, I send my resume to some more companies: Fantasy Games Unlimited, F.A.S.A., Mayfair and Hero. The lettess are addressed to the "Personnel Department." I leave out the Result: Nothing.

Date: March 1985.

Action: I decode that maybe I'm not reaching the right people. I place calls to Parker Brindhers (the bilggers game company I can white of) and Camer Designers Workshop (the company nearest where I live) and by to find out who does the hiring. After a few days of phone tag. I limitly connect with nice people from both companies. They invite me to forward my crode-tables. I do.

Result: Nothing Date: May 1985

Action: I spend a month putting together an 18-page story outline for Call of Chilaku, my favorite nelegizing game. The plot impoles a nece of alen entail laters who ladding farm women for breeding experiments. I send the manuscript to Chookum Inc., the Chilaku publisher. Result: These weeks later. I manke a letter from a Chaossum staller. He thanks me for my interest, points out several weaknesses in my outline, suggests a few books I might read, and gently but filmly informs me that Chaosium is not interested in pursuing my idea.

Date: July 1985

Action: I spend another month writing a proposal for a robplaying supplement titled Sauropouls and Sparce Drives, adaptable to any game. It's about a lang-dom of lavies which's learned to domesticate dimosaus and are thinkering with interstellar stead-Copies of the 49-page manuscript are sent to from Crown Exterprises, Palladium and Pacesetter Ltd. Date: November 1985.
Actions for the months! I work on an original board game called Stafes. The premise Reyers are mod scribints who havest body parts from contentiens and marked schools, then create their own monoters. The monoters are Limited bose in a 64 yr to fight to the death. Whosever owns the surviving monoter wins. I make game boards, creds, bothers and to lead to the content wins and the local to place and copies to MA. Results hobbins will be for the content with the content of the content wins. I make game boards, creds, bothers and the force Company and West for Games Results hobbins.

Date: January 1986. Action: Discouraged, fed up, I fire off a letter to TSR, saying in its entirety: "To Whom it May Concern: What do I have to do to write for Durgeros & Drogoros?" Result: Two weeks pass, Out of the blue, I get a call from a TSR editor, offlering me the chance to work on a project for Oriental Adventures, their new Durgeros & Drogoros inc. I am stunned. The editor proposes a centeral direction for the massure, the 3 deadlers.

and a fee. I agree to everything. He says I'll receive a contract in a few days. Before he hangs up, there's a question I'm dying to ask. "So what did you think of my resume?"

A long pause "What resume?"
